1. Nadolny visited Georgiev on 6 June 1947, and informed the latter of the Munich Conference failure. Georgiev appeared much put out, remarking that the Russian Zone Ministers who had left with a rigidly laid down agenda gave the impression of over-anxiety in losing the "bombshell" in the first minutes of the conference instead of after a semblance of discussion.
2. Georgiev then discussed with Nadolny what positive measures could be taken, as the Germans would believe that the Soviets (via the SED) are responsible for the conference failure. He agreed to phone Moscow and propose that Nadolny, Lemmer, and Ebert (SED President of Brandenburg Landtag and son of Friedrich Ebert) should go to Moscow to discuss the possibility of a unified German Government. Cover story for the trip was that they were going as members of the Slav Institute.
3. Nadolny was to see Georgiev on 12 June 1947 to hear whether or not the trip had been arranged.
